Preface.

The dictionary now offered to the public is intended to supply to the student of classical literature in Sanskrit all the information that he is likely to require in the study of the books that he reads for his examinations

Only the most important technical terms in Grammar, Rhetoric, Logic, Law, Mathematics, Philosophy, Music, Medicine, Astronomy &c. have been explained It was at first my intention to define in detail and illustrate by examples the technical terms in these branches of science, but as I proceeded, it became evident that my book would far exceed the limits imposed upon me by the publishers I, therefore, withheld much of the information that I had collected for the dictionary, and contented myself with bare definitions of the technical terms in the above mentioned branches of science It was also my intention to give Marathi equivalents for names of medical trees and plants, but as I proceeded in my work, I had to give up the plan for the same reason.

As to quotations, though I gave them copiously in the beginning, yet later on withheld them, especially such of them as were rather ornamental that useful

APPENDIX II

Sanskrit metres.

I

Introduction

Sanskrit compositon is either in the form of गद्य prose or पद्य verse or poetry arranged in the form of stanzas

A padya or stanza consists of four pâdas or quarters which are regulated either by the number of syllables (अक्षर) or by the number of syllabic instants (मात्रा)

A पद्य may either be a वृत्त or जाति

A वृत्त is a stanza the metre of which is governed by the number and arrangement of syllables in each Pâda or quarter A जाति is a stanza the metre of which is regulated by the number of syllabic instants in each quarter

Vrittas are divided into three classes A समवृत्त is that in which the Pâdas or quarters composing the stanza are all similar An अर्धसमवृत्त is that in which the alternate quarters are similar And a विषमवृत्त is that in which the quarters are all dissimilar

A syllable is as much of a word as can be pronounced at once that is a vowel with or without one or more consonats

A syllable is लघु short' or गुरु long, according as its vowel is short or long The vowels अ इ उ ऋ, and ऌ are short, and आ, ई, ऊ, ॠ, ए, ऐ, ओ and औ are long But a short vowel becomes long when it is followed by an Anusvâra, or by a Visarga, or by a conjunct consonant (The consonants प्र & ह्र, as also ब्र & क्र, are occasionally regarded as exceptions) So also the last syllable of a pâda is either long or short according to the exigence of the metre whatever be its natural length

In metres regulated by the number of syllabic instants one instant or Mâtrâ is allotted to a short vowel and two to a long one

For the sake of scanning metres regulated by the number of syllables, writers on prosody have devised eight 'Ganas' or syllabic feet each consisting of three syllables.

We shall use the symbol ⌣ to denote a short syllable and — to denote a long one The different Ganas may be represented as follows —

य	⌣ — —
र	— ⌣ —
त	— — ⌣
भ	— ⌣ ⌣
ज	⌣ — ⌣
स	⌣ ⌣ —
म	— — —
न	⌣ ⌣ ⌣

Similarly ल (⌣) is used to denote a short syllable and ग (—) a long one

We shall give here only the most commonly used metres.

In the following definitions of the metres the letters representing the Ganas such as म न स &c. as also ल, ग often drop their vowels for the exigence of metre; e g म्न stand for म न भ न, सौ or स and स &c The first line gives the Definition of a metre; the second, the Scheme in Ganas with the Yati or Cæsura the pause that may be made in reciting a quarter or verse and which is usually indicated by the words in the Definition standing in the Instrumental case—denoted in brackets by Arabic figures
